

Ebooks Or Text Books For College?

Whether it's an essay, a research paper or a quiz or an exam, students nowadays will always be found searching for their related content on the internet. There are no more visits to the libraries (you have to agree on this one; libraries are no longer a cool place to hang out at) and no more searching through piles of books. All you have to do is type in what you need and you will only be entertained with what exactly you needed; no more no less. Every piece of poetry, all great pieces of writing can now be read off from the laptops anywhere you want, so why waste time on buying so many books when you can find everything at your home and that too in one place. This is from where the concept of eBooks set in. These are electronic and digitized books which look like the enlarged versions of palmtops, and contain images et cetera. Even eBooks for colleges are available now. Why use eBooks? People who have rapidly started using the eBooks argue that it is much more environmentally safe to use eBooks instead of paperback books as this will save trees. Though it might sound as a lame excuse to many of you but there are many environmentalists out there who would actually give up books just for the sake of this. And this does reduce paper wastage. But a more proficient use of eBooks is where one has to use the book content again and again. Books can be misplaced easily and can be damaged or torn if they are used too often or continuously for a long period of time. But with eBooks, you can have you book content all safe and secure, for multiple reviewing even. But despite all these reasons given in favour of the popular eBooks, they can never really be a perfect substitute for the traditional and long loved paperback books. Those who have always books and know the real meaning of reading will always find their love intact for the books.

Advantages of using textbooks.

EBooks haven't been that popular for college students indeed. It is true that one cannot study completely depending on the eBooks. Books are books. Even though some claim that books can be expensive to purchase, especially for college students, it shouldn't be kept out of mind that these books, once used, can be sold back on half the price or sometimes even more as used textbooks for sale are very popular these days. Textbooks are also easy to read; people complain about eye irritation after reading for hours on screens. Why haven't eBooks been so popular among college students? Many people forget that the cost of buying the eBook device is more than buying you a textbook. They might be a onetime investment but still will cost you more than a book. Most importantly, college students cannot take the risk of an electronic device. Electronic devices are prone to errors and breakdowns and this might not present such a pleasant situation for students who have to study for an exam the next day.
